Where is the 'mayil' ?

A team of divers and others led by the state's Idol Wing Police were back at the tank of Sri Kapaleeswarar Temple, in their attempt to search for the idol of a peacock which is said to have been removed from a sannidhi inside the temple many years ago.

Two divers were seen preparing to get deep into the waters, while a few others were seen in an inflated boat. The team had undertaken a similar job inside the tank when the temple's Panguni utsavam was on recently. The efforts are being made by the police after the Madras High Court directed the police to do all it can to probe the case.

is a tradition and married women, on karadaiyan nonbu pray to goddess Am-bal for the well-being of their husbands, the fast is broken after completing the puja, said a note from Parampara.

Parampara Tulsi Seva was organised at Sri Vedantha Desikar Devasthanam, Mylapore; here, people received the tulsi saplings. Tulsi saplings were also planted in the temple nandavanam.

VINCENT'S JOTTINGS

By VINCENT D' SOUZA

Have you heard stories of travelling by boat on the Buckingham Canal which runs through our city?

Scores of Mylaporeans who used to reside off the banks of this Canal must have vivid memories of the sailing boats, the hard-working boatmen and the goods that got transported on this water body.

Though I have heard many anecdotal stories about life in the Canal, I am yet to get a clear and large picture of how the boats fed the very popular market, the Thaneerthurai Market which made way for a big block of apartments on Royapettah High Road. Where did the vegetables come from? Who grew them? Were there agents in this business?

Of late, I am learning a lot of how this Canal was the popular means of transport for a generation of families of this city who kept their date with the annual feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel in the seaside village of Kovalam (Covelong).

The wealth of information began with a simple online post in the Madras Local History Group on Facebook. The post was on the first church in Kovalam, the John D'Monte connect to this place in colonial times and the legends that grew around D'Monte and this church.

I was aware that many Anglo-Indian families made it a point to attend the annual feast day Holy Mass at Covelong, in the manner they kept their date with feasts at the churches in Little Mount and on Lazarus Church Road and in Perambur. And these families had told me that they took the Canal boats from the Adyar end.

Keen to know more about the nature of these pilgrimages, I posted a note on this theme on another Facebook page titled Madras Anglos. And boy! Over the past week, about 70-plus posts on this thread, packed with anecdotes give us a vivid picture of slices of social history of practices in this city in the 1940s, 50s and 60s.

Let me share a few interesting anecdotes here.

Jeffery Woods recalls that the priest at St Mary's Church on Armenian Street took the altar-boys on a camping trip to Covelong; they took a bus from Broadway, that dropped them off some 5 kms from the church and the boys had to wade through knee-deep water that formed the backwaters here.

Lew Miranda says that Anglo-Indian families attending the feast would cook idlis and pork curry and sell it.

A. J. Lee recalls that in the 50s, many families would travel in boats, taking with them vessels to cook their food at Covelong; they would buy firewood locally and once Holy Mass was over, they would camp out, the guitars providing the music for the fun.

Jean Fonceca recalls very vividly as she writes this - Four families of relatives embarked upon the old boats literally pulled by two men on either side of the banks of the Canal. We engaged about three boats and boarded them at Lattice Bridge... the boats set sail around 3 p.m. and we arrived near Covelong around 6 a.m. the following morning. Our summer holidays were spent there...

Social histories of a city, of a community, or even of an area or a street are hardly recorded though they are vital, for they illustrate the lives around us. If you have stories to retell, stories of your family, of the locality..... that present and future generations of your family will enjoy and appreciate, start a journal now.

Searching for 'missing' idol in temple tank

● This is with reference to Mylapore Times online report on police searching for the 'missing' peacock idol of Sri Kapali Temple in the temple's tank. Can the police not use sonar equipment to locate the idol since the area being searched is relatively small compared to massive searches for missing ships in the ocean?

- Ramji

Ramasubramanian

● The temple tank was almost dry and barren for a very long time. It filled up with water only after the monsoon rains. The search for the idol now (when the tank is full) is a big joke.

- Padmaja P.

Serious problems on R. K. Mutt Road

Two issues create serious problems on R. K. Mutt Road on the south side.

Issue No.1 - The rule of 'one way' portion of this road (from Post Office point till Mandaveli MTC bus terminus) and 'one way' portion of St Marys Road (from Devanathan Street till R K Mutt Road) is least respected by motorists. Bikes, autos and cars and even lorries come down the 'one way' side, causing chaos. A Traffic policeman must be posted here during peak hours.

Issue No 2 - The road has partially caved in on both sides of R K Mutt Road (near R K Nagar BSNL office) which has caused minor accidents. Chennai Corporation must rectify the road.

- Kalidas Muralidharan

Request to Railways: re-open counter for seniors

Recently, I was at Thirumayilai railway tickets booking counter to book train tickets: there was a heavy rush here and when I searched for the senior citizens' counter, it was closed. The staff said that senior citizen concession is not granted now and the counter for senior citizens closed, so I preferred a complaint by e-mail to Southern Railways, requesting to re-open the counter. I got a call from the Railways head office and the staff said that my suggestion has been forwarded to Delhi for suitable action.

- K. R. Jambunathan

Councillors must act like Amrida

Hats off to the GCC councillor, Amrida Varshini who was out on the field even at night to manage local civic problems despite the demise of her aged father recently. If she continues with the same zeal and zest, we are sure this ward in Mylapore will stand to benefit. We also hope other Mylapore councillors get down to the field and direct civic works.

A colony like Sullivan Gardens, near Vivekananda College has been suffering badly during monsoon time - despite the construction of a new drainage system, water stagnation is experienced during this season.

MY STORY

My experiences with English Theatre

By KRISHNA KUMAR S.

Growing up to natakams and dramas in the 1970s and 80s of Chennai, in and around the sabhas of Mylapore and Triplicane, am often amused when people ask me, "What do you do?" and I reply, "Theatre!"

Why? Because of their rejoinder: "Cinema theatre vechirukeengala? Which cinema theatre do you own?"

Then, with a naughty smirk I end up patiently explaining: "No, I'm a drama artist." Unfortunately that's the status quo of theatre arts and several groups, without boundaries, to today when Chennai's non-Sabha-supported, amateur English theatre circuit boasts of several small to big independent groups, it has been a long transformation. Yet, many in the city do not even know we exist, we perform, we put up regular shows.

From The Madras Players as the (pioneering) and only regular English theatre company, today there are groups that specialise in specific styles or subjects of theatre-making.

drama culture in Chennai today. From the days I entered theatre actively in late 1980s - early 90s, when the English theatre community was a close-knit family of around 50 people, most of whom invariably straddled

We at Masquerade, Chennai remained largely the experimental theatre group that we started out as. Recently, we experimented with a bilingual form of Tenglish theatre, adjusting to the changing scenario of less of purely 'only English' being spoken both at community level as well as in performance spaces.

One thing that hasn't changed in my theatre - we have put teens and tweens at the forefront, working regularly with them, training them. The city still doesn't have an exclusive space for children centric theatre - adults regularly performing for children, as they do in Europe.

We're striving to find that niche. Hopefully we will shortly. Right now, it's about making people understand that 'theatre' refers not to cinema house, but stage dramas.

● Krishna Kumar, a resident of Alwarpet is the founder and artistic director of Masquerade-Chennai theatre group.

College student enjoys being part of all-night procession of Panguni utsavam

By S. Prabhu

Mylapore resident S. Aparna, a first year student at MOP Vaishnav College, has been a devotee of Sri Kapaleeswarar all her life. She says that from the time she was a three year old, she has been a regular at the annual Panguni Utsavam and it is the one utsavam that she does not want to miss.

Rishabham has always been very close to her heart. "I cherish the Rishabham a lot and have a special bonding with him. He is pleasing to the eye and when you look at him the first time when he nears the raja gopuram entrance, you are suddenly struck with a 'calm devotion'" says Aparna.

She says when she saw Sri Kapaleeswarar atop the naga vahanam on one evening, she was inspired to join the all-night procession as part of the fifth day celebrations. This time the procession lasted for 8 hours because of the early

S. Aparna

10 p.m. start. She was there just after 9 p. m. on Sunday for the Pancha Moorthi procession inside the temple ahead of the vahana procession and spent the entire Sunday night at the Rishabha Vahana procession around the Mada Streets.

This enabled Aparna to soak in all that took place – Kapaleeswarar's movements on the palaquin, the gala atmosphere with a packed crowd at the start of the procession, the nagaswaram and the beating of musical instruments of the Shiva Adiyars, the Vedic recital and the recitation of sacred verses by the Othuvvars. She says that it was a very different and exciting experience for her and that she could feel a lot of positive energy within her after the procession. "Right from my childhood, it had been a dream to be part of an entire procession at the Panguni Utsavam. I never knew that I could pull it off. No one in the family has been at a procession all through the night. It feels fulfilling that I could do it this early in my life."

She credits her parents for her bonding with Kapaleeswarar. "Instead of taking me to movies, they created a devotional interest by making a temple visit as my daily destination."

Next on her list – the Aruthra Utsavam.

The 10-day Panguni Brahmostsavam at Sri Adhi Kesava Perumal Temple in Mylapore got over on March 29. The hoisting of the flag was on March 20 and the golden Garuda seva was on March 22. The popular chariot (ther) festival was held early on the morning of March 26.

PEOPLE IN CIVIC ACTION

Kallukaran Street community transforms eyesore lane in its backyard

By Our Staff Reporter

How do you change the face of a public space that stinks from the leaks of cattle dung and urine and is treated as a dump by auto mechanics?

Beautify it with street art and get the residents to make use of the private lane. It works.

It has worked for much of the community on Kallukaran Street. A small colony that lives alongside the ancient Sri Madhava Perumal Temple in Mylapore.

"Today, our children sit out and play carrom games and the seniors unwind and chat in the evenings," says resident K. R. Jambunathan, a former State Bank of India staffer who has lived here for about 70 years.

The seed for change was sown in January this year, even as the pandemic began to wear off in the city.

The civic-minded members of this colony met to toss a few ideas that could improve conditions outside their houses. Some of them had read about how people in some colonies in the area had painted their public walls to discourage pedestrians and others from urinating or dumping waste. The group decided that art could be a solution.

Says local resident Appu Jagadish, who hails from a family of traditional sculptors who once worked here and gave the street its name, "People here were waiting for somebody to take the lead and once that happened, they supported with money and work." Appu, who runs a NGO that provides lunch to the homeless in this part of the city has got his NGO's volunteers to maintain this lane in the past.

And so, residents pooled money, bought paint tins and brushes and on a weekend, invited adults and children to draw and paint the wall section that faces the lane. This effort was repeated on the following Sundays and will continue.

The drab look had disappeared. Meanwhile, somebody fixed a basketball hoop on one section of the wall, some others fixed net-poles to enable people to play shuttle-cock and some others got out one or two carrom boards to enable children to play in the open. The space began to have a liveliness of its own.

When a few simple seating contraptions were fixed, senior citizens stepped out, sat here and chatted for a while.

"The idea of getting residents to own the place and make good use of it so that the space could not be vandalised has succeeded," says Jambunathan, who now plans to invite the Mylapore MLA to formally launch the tree-planting effort here.

If you are wondering why this community made such an effort to bring change in their lives then we must roll back to a bit of the recent past and the condition of this place.

The rear portions of almost all houses on Kallukaran Street face one of the walls of Sri Madhava Perumal Temple. Between the houses and the temple wall is what could be called a lane, some 12ft in width which was cemented recently. In the past, maids working in these houses would enter the house from the rear and work there.

Since this 'L' shaped strip of lane was in some ways, no man's land, encroachments took place.

At one point, there were a few cattle sheds where people reared cattle, the milk sold locally. Now, only one remains and this remains a civic bother for the colony. Others also encroached on the lane, parts of it became garbage dumps. Today, an automobile repairs shop illegally operates here.

Civic-conscious residents like Jambunathan and Appu Jagadish realised that if the face of this lane had to change then that change had to start with their own efforts.

That is how some creative ideas got discussed and the wall art effort began. The art effort led to other actions that has made this public space a welcoming one.

Obituary

Kausthub Swaminathan, life-long resident of Mylapore passed away on March 21. He was 23.

Son of ex-banker Suresh and Viji Suresh, residents of Luz Avenue in Mylapore, Kausthub was an ardent sports enthusiast.

Although he was wheelchair bound due to his lifelong battle with DMD (Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy), his indomitable spirit enabled him to carve a niche as a sports columnist in online portals such as Sportskeeda, CricXstasy and Followyoursport. This also provided him an opportunity to meet and interact with India cricketer Ravichandran Ashwin, something he cherished with pride.

Kausthub actively advocated the need for better access to entertainment venues for differently abled people and often wrote passionately about it in social media. Once, he wrote on the need for better access at the main gate of Nageswara Rao Park in Luz.

As a social media influencer, he actively straddled multiple platforms such as Facebook, Instagram and Twitter where he interacted with numerous followers and served as an inspiration to many others.

He leaves behind his parents Suresh and Viji and his sister Deepika Suresh.

They can be reached at 4/13, Luz Avenue. Phone: 97101 64040

Panguni Fest Scenes

People make a celebration. And this is true of temple festivals in the Mylapore zone.

And this spirit is very evident in the annual Panguni utsavam of Sri Kapaleswarar Temple, which got back to its grand spread after two years, a break caused by the pandemic.

Be it the priests, the volunteers, the artistes and the devotees - they were all closely involved in the utsavam that just got over. And we at Mylapore Times captured the special spirit of this festival in pictures and in videos.

Kuyil Thottam colony in San Thome to be re-developed

TN Urban Habitat Development Board is constructing new blocks in place of the old ones in many parts of Mylapore

By Our Staff Reporter

Yet another colony of residences built by the state's Slum Clearance Board (now renamed TN Urban Habitat Development Board) will be levelled and a new set of apartments will come up. The colony is Kuyil Thottam, located off San Thome High Road, to the south of San Thome Higher Secondary School.

Recently, state minister T. M. Anbarasan who oversees the Board's activities formally issued cheques to a few residents; each family which resided here and is moving out gets a one-time rental compensation of Rs.25,000. (photo below)

Says Mylapore MLA, Dha. Velu, "The previous AIADMK government paid Rs.8000 and following our plea, chief minister M. K. Stalin has recently increased this to Rs.25,000. We got up this function in the colony with the minister present, to assure residents that this money will reach them now and that we are serious about the re-development plan."

Kuyil Thottam, once a colony of hutments hugging the busy San Thome High Road was developed by the Slum Clearance Board in the late 1970s. Some 350 families have resided here though over the years, some house-owners sold their apartments and new-comers made several improvements.

The state-run Board has been negotiating with the Kuyil Thottam community over the past three years to re-develop this colony and plans fell in place recently.

Stalin, a resident here says over 200 families have vacated the apartments and the rest intend to move out soon. "Since most families either work in this area or have deep links around, they are renting out places closely," said Stalin.

The Mylapore MLA says the Board intends to build apartment blocks which will create about 380 apartments and that allotment is also being made to those who resided on encroached land inside the colony.

He says about 150 families have accepted the rental compensation cheques and that demolition work has begun.

Across Mylapore, many such colonies, first developed by the Slum Clearance Board - are under various stages of re-development.

P. S. Senior School held its Annual Day celebration at the school's campus in Alamelumangapuram, Mylapore on March 26. It was held in the open. Dr. V. Kamakoti, Director, IIT Madras was the chief guest. As part of the event, the school's annual report was presented and the annual magazine was released. Students were also honoured. The event ended with a medley of cultural events presented by the students.

NAC Jewellers opens Stylori Silver brand of jewellery at its store

By Our Staff Reporter

NAC Jewellers recently inaugurated the flagship store of Stylori Silver, a brand of silver jewellery at its store on North Mada Street, Mylapore.

Stylori Silver crafts silver jewellery that can be worn by women of any age and style, says a note from NAC. Since its inception a year ago as an online brand, Stylori Silver has caught the eye of online shoppers.

On March 7, Stylori Silver opened this swanky showroom in the NAC complex.

The two-storey showroom displays over 10,000 pieces of silver jewellery besides exclusive silver articles and gifts. From dainty silver pieces to complete bridal sets, oxidised silver jewellery and edgy-couture silver pieces, the store has it all.
