The teppam festival for Thai Poosam at Sri Kapali Temple was held on January 25, 26 and 27.

In the evenings, on all three days, the deities were grandly decorated and taken out in procession from the temple to the west side of the tank and then set inside the decorated teppam. On day one, Sri Ka-paleeswarar was taken around in the teppam and on the next two, it was Sri Singaravelar.

People were allowed into the tank on some sides, where they sat and watched the teppam do the rounds.

BOOK RELEASE: 'Carnatic and Western Music - Blending the two Classical Music Systems'

Famed violinist V S Narasimhan is formally releasing his book 'Carnatic and Western Music' - Blending the two Classical Music Systems' at an informal meeting on January 28 at Arkay Centre, Luz at 10.30am.

Trained in the Carnatic as well as in the Western system of music, Narasimhan who was a top end artiste in India's film music world, has led a team of artistes of a group named Madras String Quartet which has presented Carnatic music performed by artistes on the viola and cello, besides violins.

Narasimhan's thoughts are outlined here - as a note on the theme of this book -

It is my desire and vision that cello should become a prominent instrument of Carnatic music both as solo and accompanying instrument just as the violin is.

The grandeur of the tone of a cello in Carnatic music is something I hear in my head. Similarly bass players could incorporate Carnatic music ornamentation techniques. Viola should also become a featured component of Carnatic music as a solo and as accompaniment.

If these instruments which cover a wide range of frequencies get into the hands of skillful artists, the result would be a novel symphonic style of arrangement that would gain a broader international audience and would be a transformative event bringing new dimensions to Carnatic music.'

The book is on sale at Amazon.in

VINCENT's JOTTINGS

By VINCENT D' SOUZA

The man smokes, the dog stands still and the world moves on.

Every night, around nine, this wiry, bespectacled, less than 5ft man, stick in one hand, walks his little white dog to one end of the street where I reside.

The duo stop at the intersection, where the streetlight is screened by an untamed avenue tree.

In the dark, you spot a burning cigarette, the vest of the man and the whiteness of the dog.

The man pulls deep at his smoke while his dog stands still, unmoved by other dogs taken out by other men and women.

The dog doesn't even look up at his master. It stands still, allowing the man to enjoy his smoke to the last drag. And it moves only when there is a tap on the leash.

The man and his dog are seen again every morning; the duo move at a fast pace. On a rare occasion, the dog noses around, when it senses other dogs have left their pee signatures.

The man never slows down at his favourite smoke spot.

Over the past year, the number of men and women who take out their dogs in my neighbourhood's streets have trebled.

I don't know if it is a pet thing.

Or because endowed people need some amusement.

Or there's a need to be extra secure. Or because those who want to walk and keep fit and keep talking on their phone in privacy need the excuse of a dog out.

The number of dogs who are patrons-less are also great in number. Since many of them have had kind souls strap a tie around their neck, which gives them some form of ownership, they are not trapped during the odd campaigns of the civic body.

Street dogs have their territories and mark them out well. And they are well-behaved too.

They have their own masters of sorts. They may perk up when I call out to them or whistle but then they are off to their comfort zones.

I guess as houses and apartments become lonely spaces, as people lead lonely lives, the company of a pet dog is very welcome. They can converse and cheer you up, accompany you to the store, bark off nosey folks and challenge the attempts of petty thieves.

But there's lots of poop along the pavements.

Aren't there 'How to clear your Dog's Poop' videos on YouTube?

Make most of public spaces

I have come across voluntary groups who wish to conduct medical camps, study groups or workshops on art and music. Most often they abandon their projects after having failed to get venues for free or at reasonable rents.

As suggested in Vincent's Jottings column in Mylapore Times dated January 20, they can use public places after obtaining permission from the authorities concerned.

Alternate use of old bridge

Marathons disrupt traffic, particularly when held on the Thiru Vi Ka bridge. Is it possible to restore the old bridge, limiting its use to pedestrians? This would make the routes more scenic, walking space would be more and traffic flow would not be hindered.

Nomination norms; some tips

C. R. Balaji in his letter to Mylapore Times has rightly pointed out the reasons for giving nomination. A nominee cannot claim even if one legal heir contests. If the nomination is not given and the amount is small, banks release the amount after getting an affidavit and surety.

If the amount is large, then all banks insist on a succession certificate issued by the High Court and that is a cumbersome process. It is always best to ensure the nomination is reflected in the fixed deposit receipts.

Watch weighing scale of vendors

While disposing of old newspapers with a local vendor, I found that the weighing scale had been tampered with by the vendor. The scale which first showed 9.8 kgs for a stack which was more than 3 feet, actually weighed 14 kgs. Public must not trust vendors by default and act prudently.

Prana pratishtha at Sri Ram Temple, Ayodhya: events held in Mylapore

By Our Edit Team

Mylapore's Mada Streets woke up to the music of chanting and of instruments this morning; margazhi season is over but the members of the Swami Gnanananda Bhajan Mandali with its base in Mandaveli had started at dawn to celebrate the prana pratishtha at the newly built Sri Ram Temple in Ayodhya which took place on, January 22. 6.30 am onwards events got going at R. R. Sabha, Mylapore - there was devotional music, Shri Rama Bhajanam and a string of discourses by acharyas. People filed in slowly through the morning. At The Grove School, Saraswathi Kendra which is located in the Eldams Road campus of C.P. Ramaswami Aiyar Foundation in Alwarpet, the student community sat around the images of Lord Rama and Sita, with music and classical dance recitals held here.

It was an early start to events at Sri Karpaga Vinayakar Temple in R. A. Puram - the abhishekam started around 6.30 am and was followed by recitation of Veda Parayanam and Vishnu Sahasranamam. The event was organised by R A Puram Bhakta Jana Sangam,. (first photo).

The community at Madhava Niwas located near Sri Madhava Perumal Temple, Mylapore got together to pray and sing bhajans on this occasion. They pooled resources to share a light meal with those present.

A group of children led by their teacher, Dr. Vedha went around the Mada Streets after taking out a procession inside Sri Kapali Temple. Children were dressed in costumes that symbolised Rama, Sita, Hanuman and Lakshman. (Photo: Sreeram Selvaraj)

That Monday evening, at Arkay Centre, Luz, scholar Dr. Sudha Seshayyan gave a talk and this was followed by a classical music concert by vocalist Palghat Ramprasad.

Religious events were also held in a few other places.
